CLASSICAL SUMMER SCHOOL IN ROME

For the twelfth successive year, the Department of Classics is offering a special summer course in Rome, Italy.

The course, Classics 459—Roman Archaeology and Civilization, will run from 5 July to 10 August 1978 and will be conducted by R.C. Smith, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Classics. While the main part of the course will be devoted to a study of the city of Rome, also included will be a survey of Italian classical history and of the culture of the Etruscans.

The course will include several field trips, among them a visit to the villa of Hadrian, two visits to the ancient port of Ostia, and an excursion to the famous Etruscan tombs. A trip to southern Italy will include visits to Pompeii, Herculaneum, Baiae, Paestum, Capri, Naples, Beneventum, and Cumae. A trip to northern Italy will include visits to Orvieto, Arezzo, Tarquinia, and Florence.

The course has been designed to allow students a first-hand opportunity of studying the culture and history of the area and will provide ample time for both private study and general sightseeing. While the course will also constitute a full year's credit for students enrolled in the University who require such credits toward the attainment of their degrees, other students attending the University and adults not currently enrolled at this institution will be welcomed as Special Students.

Classics students will also have the opportunity of hearing J.A. Forbes, Professor in the Department of Art and Design, who will be conducting a summer course in the art of the Baroque in Italy. The two classes will join on trips to the villa of Hadrian and to Palestrina. The University of Calgary will provide courses in Renaissance History and Italian as part of the Alberta Summer School in Rome.

For more information concerning Classics 459, please contact Dr. Smith at the Department of Classics, telephone 432-3257.

CAUT FILES COMPLAINT AGAINST ALBERTA PUBLIC SERVICE EMPLOYEE RELATIONS ACT

According to the Canadian Association of University Teachers, the Alberta Public Service Employee Relations Act, proclaimed in September, violates world labor standards. The CAUT, representing more than 20,000 university professors across Canada, has filed an official complaint with the International Labor Organization in Geneva.

The CAUT took this measure with the consent of its Alberta affiliates: the faculty associations at the University of Alberta (AASUA), the University of Calgary, the University of Lethbridge, and Athabasca University, and the Confederation of Alberta Faculty Associations. The Canadian Labor Congress made a similar challenge in November.

According to a news release issued by the CAUT, the new legislation effectively removes University professors in Alberta both from the scope of the Public Service Employee Relations Act itself and from the provisions of the Alberta Labor Act. As a result, faculty have been left with no legislative vehicle by which they can collectively bargain their terms and conditions of employment with the universities.

The CAUT is basing its case primarily on the provisions of the International Labor Organization Convention 87, which has been ratified by Canada and which binds member countries to certain basic "freedom of association" guarantees. In addition, it is argued that the new legislation violates the spirit of Convention 98, which deals with the right to organize and bargain collectively. While Canada has not ratified the latter convention, the CAUT believes that there is a heavy burden of legal and moral responsibility upon the governments of Canada and its provinces to adhere to the letter and spirit of ILO Conventions.

The situation for faculty in Alberta is now roughly the same as that for faculty in British Columbia, where similar legislation removed university professors from the ambit of collective bargaining.

In the news release, CAUT Executive Secretary Donald Savage is quoted as saying "The legislative drift is alarming. Moreover, it is totally unwarranted, since more than twenty universities across the country have more than amply demonstrated that legal status collective bargaining with faculty can work with a minimum of disruption on campuses. While we feel forced to take this matter before the ILO, we are nevertheless hopeful that an amicable solution can be achieved through discussions between our affiliates and the Alberta government."

Further information on this matter may be obtained from Ron Bercov, Professor of Mathematics, Past President of the AASUA, and Vice-President of the CAUT, telephone 432-3815.
